FOR TESTING

Meanwhile, the dusk over the forest was searching for stars that would raise it towards the sky, but the stars were too high up to offer it a hand.

Eros continued pondering for a long time.

As though he had lit a light in the darkness, his life shone forth in a completely new light. The radiance of his thoughts was as clear as the water that flows down from the mountains and as unstoppable as the highest ocean wave.

The sun slowly came out and extended its hand to the dusk, so that it could raise itself towards the sky. The first rays of the sun touched the leaves on the trees and the sun's warm love poured over the clearing.

Eros stood up and the forest breeze caught the scent of his body. Tufts of grass turned green and the tips of branches budded as if wanting to touch his naked body. Even a tiny snail slid out of its shell and raised its horns high up in the air.

Suddenly everything in the clearing came to a standstill, all of the tiny creatures and all of the plants, and all sorrow, worries, and suffering disappeared like dreams touched by the morning. Expecting to be kissed again by the forest breeze, their tiny bodies, leaves, and stems tensed up as if having absorbed the drops of dew from the moist ground. They were overwhelmed by an immeasurable lust for love.

With every breath their desire escalated and their thoughts merged in order to be able to touch Life. It was as though they had entered spring in the middle of winter.

In the tips of their limbs, leaves, and needles they soon felt a gentle tingling; an indescribably beautiful sensation that grew and slowly emanated from their bodies. Then their breath was taken away.

Eros didn't notice the harmony that had taken over the life in the clearing. He bent over a small puddle that had formed in a hollow among the leaves and grass. What he saw in it took even the wind's breath away.

The surface of the water became still and the reflection he saw cleared as though he were watching it in a mirror. The sculpted body facing him with its nudity called up dreams, and the taut muscles sparkled in the sun as though someone had overlaid them with gold leaf. His olive complexion was smooth as the softness of a feather and the strength of his perfect body reflected from his arms on the water's surface. His broad shoulders were undaunted by their heavy burden and the sensual fingers of his hands could caress the stars in the night sky. His penis was large and handsome, almost hungry for love, and his gaze was as clear as the day after a rain, and mysteriously attractive.

Eros touched his chest with his fingers to make sure that he was really seeing a reflection of his own image. He stared into the shimmering depth of his own eyes and in the end felt the truth of power.

He closed his eyes. His nostrils flared and he took a deep breath of the air in the clearing. Then he dropped to his knees and made love to himself until his semen fell seven times onto the moist leaves that covered the black forest soil.
